

ESG INDEX 2019

Measure
of Risks
For 177 countries

The ESG Index is an efficient tool allowing one to quickly assess third-party risks in relation to three issue categories: the environment, human rights and health & safety. All three measures operate independently of the others and can also be considered as separate indexes.

Advanced research of relevant databases has allowed Global Risk Profile to offer maximum coverage for each sub-index :

- Environment 180 countries
- Human Rights 189 countries
- Health & Safety 184 countries

In addition, a global scoring is calculated for as many as 177 countries and territories.

The Environment sub-index is composed of ratified key conventions (namely the Kyoto Protocol and Paris Agreement) as well as the Environmental Performance Index.

Risk level related to Human Rights is notably measured according to the ratification status of 18 key conventions, social rights indicators (related to slavery, child labour, education, housing etc.), civil and political rights indicators (press freedom, minority rights, etc) and collective rights indicators (measures of peace, right to self determination etc.).

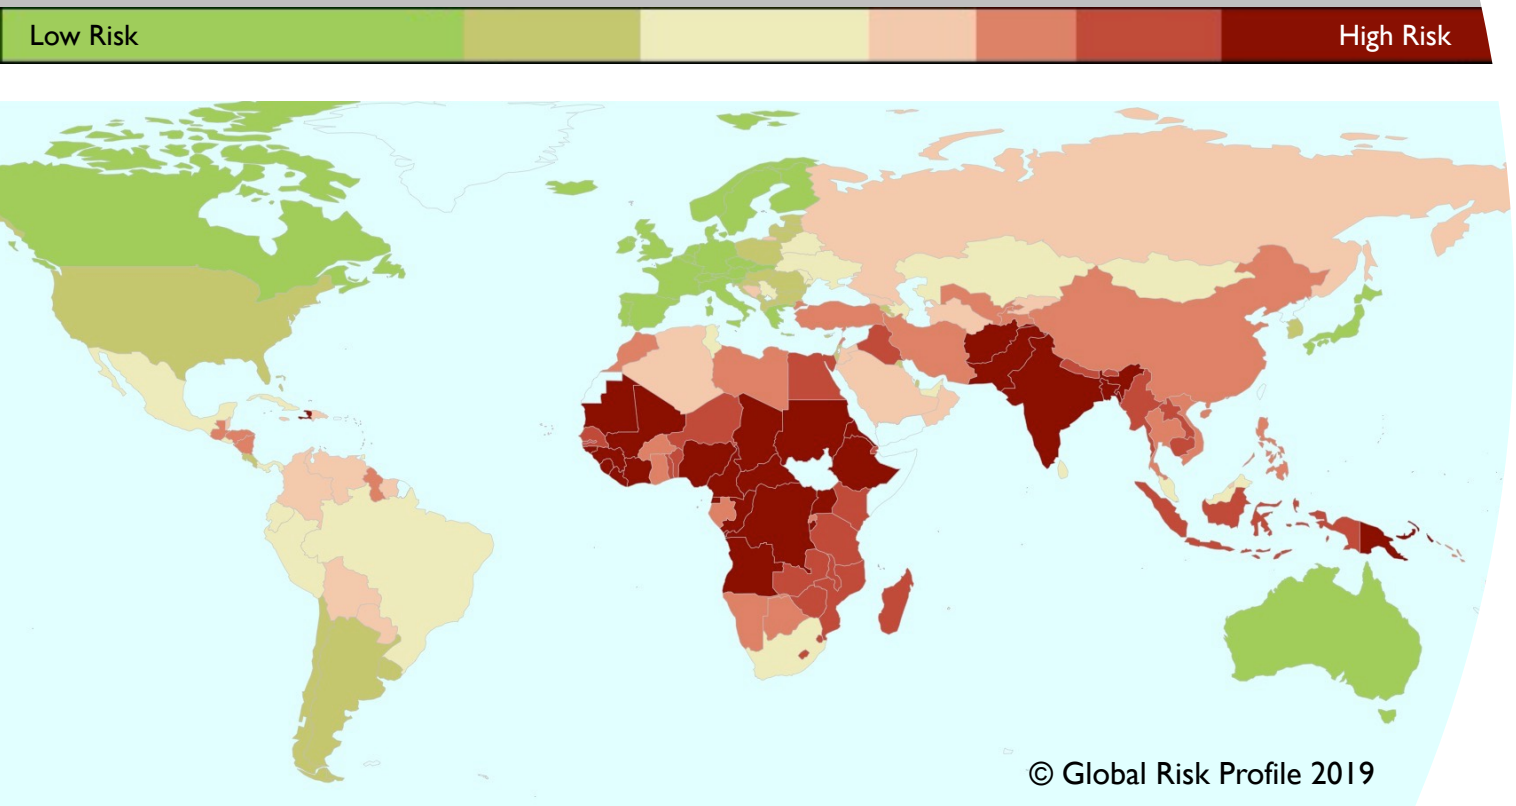

The last sub-index, Health & Safety, is characterized by health indicators (such as life expectancy, access to drinking water) and safety indicators (safety at work, social protection). An adjustment for spatial inequality (urban / rural) is also considered.

In total, 45 open source data variables that exclusively originate from internationally recognized entities were included.

Data were standardized and aggregated to a 0-100 scale, where 0 corresponds to the lowest risk and 100 corresponds to the highest risk, allowing users to evaluate and compare country results between them.

Evaluates 177 countries based on 45 carefully selected datasets that exclusively originate from 17 internationally recognized entities :
